Energy Star

Shoppers can expect savings

By Anthony Martinez

Joint Base San Antonio energy manager

We hear a lot about Energy Star these days, but what does it really mean?

Since it's one of the Joint Base San Antonio Energy Policy requirements when choosing new or replacing old equipment and appliances, I decided to do a little research and find out.

First, I searched the Internet – profound, huh? Google came up with 917 million results, the first non-commercial one being the Energy Star home page. It told me Energy Star “is a government-backed program helping businesses and individuals protect the environment through superior energy efficiency.”

That sounded logical. Next was sorting through the choices for more information: Find Energy Star Products, Energy Star Qualified, About Energy Star, Federal Tax Credits, Rebate Finder, and Buildings and Plants.

“About Energy Star” contained a lot of back-patting on how much money the program has saved us in home and business, and how much it has protected the environment. But I wanted to know more about what it means if a product has an Energy Star label on it, so I clicked on “Energy Star Qualified.”

Here I learned these products must meet the following “key guiding principles” to earn the coveted label:

- Product categories must contribute significant energy savings nationwide.
- Qualified products must deliver the features and performance demanded by consumers, in addition to increased energy efficiency.
- If the qualified product costs more than a conventional, less-efficient counterpart, purchasers will recover their investment in increased energy efficiency through utility bill savings, within a reasonable period of time.
- Energy efficiency can be achieved through broadly available, non-proprietary technologies offered by more than one manufacturer.

- Product energy consumption and performance can be measured and verified with testing.
- Labeling would effectively differentiate products and be visible for purchasers.

Knowing the criteria for a product to get the Energy Star label, I sought an example – a new copier for the office. Under “Find Energy Star Products” on the home page I found a categorized product listing, and under “Business and Government,” and “Imaging Equipment,” was a list of copiers and fax machines, which can be downloaded in either Excel or PDF format.

I then took it one step further to see if the machine I use was listed. After a little searching, because it's on the multi-functional device worksheet rather than the copier, I found that it was an Energy Star product. Eureka, it worked!

So, the next time you buy equipment for your office, remember you're required to choose from the Energy Star-approved listing. But also remember it's a good idea to check this list when buying home appliances and that even if the purchase price appears a little higher than some other brands, you'll save money over the long haul.

JBSA SPECIAL NEEDS RESOURCE FAIR

The Joint Base San Antonio Special Needs Resource Fair and Child Find fair is Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., at Morgan's Wonderland.

The event is open to all JBSA Exceptional Family Member Program participants and immediate military family members. Admission for individuals with special needs is free; for attendees not preregistered, admission is $10.

For family registration, visit <http://jbsaefmp.wufoo.com/forms/jbsa-3rd/annual-resource-fair-and-child-find-event>. For organization registration, visit <http://jbsaefmp.wufoo.com/forms/jbsa-resource-fair-organization-registration>.

DISPOSITION SERVICES CLOSURE

The Defense Logistics Agency Disposition Services, Field Activity at San Antonio, will be closed Monday through Oct. 19 for a computer systems upgrade and reopen Oct. 22 with limited service.

The organization's current computer system will be replaced with the Reutilization Business Integration (RBI) solution. RBI is expected to provide real-time asset visibility throughout the DLA supply chain with little or no delay between when data is entered and when it is available to other users. Items available for reutilization, transfer, donation, and sales will also have increased visibility.

Excess property and material turned in from the military services is first offered for reuse within the Department of Defense at no cost and free shipping. Remaining items can be transferred to federal agencies or donated to state and local governments and other qualified agencies or used to aid humanitarian relief efforts.

For more details, call 210-221-3306 or visit www.dispositionservices.dla.mil.

AIRMAN'S VOICE SPEED MENTORING

The Airman's Voice Speed Mentoring session is Oct. 23, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Gateway Club.

The mentoring session is designed for airmen basic to senior airmen. It features subject matter experts in areas of professional development. Topics include special duty, promotions, retraining, off-duty education, commissioning opportunities, and civilian transitioning.

For more details, contact Staff Sgt. Melissa Evans at 210-488-5436.

'Amazing job'

New 37th TRG commander enthused about mission

By Mike Joseph
Senior Writer

Descriptive adjectives hardly scratch the surface when it comes to the new 37th Training Group commander's enthusiasm for the job, but, the smile on Col. Jeanne Hardrath's face and the excitement in her voice say it all.

"This is an amazing job," said Hardrath, who took command of the technical training group in early August. "I knew coming in I had really hit the jackpot. To lead the 37th TRG, with its extraordinary reputation, is a phenomenal opportunity.

"And then throw in the fact I get to bring my family to San Antonio," she said. "They love it here. It's been exciting since we arrived.

"It's been five years since I've been assigned to an actual Air Force base," she said. "Coming back to a base where I can work with my fellow Airmen was an exciting prospect for me."

Her last three assignments included an assignment as chief of the Integrated Life Cycle Management Functional Policy Branch at the Air Staff; as an Air Force fellow with the RAND Corp., Santa Monica, Calif., a non-profit institution that helps improve policy and decision-making through research and analysis; and as the director of Clothing and Textiles for Defense Logistics Agency – Troop Support in Philadelphia.

Being assigned to Lackland is like a coming home of sorts for Hardrath.

She began her Air Force career 27 years ago as an enlisted Airman go-

"I'm a product of some very great mentoring at all levels. Our senior NCOs play a key role in helping commanders turn young officers into leaders."

— Col. Jeanne Hardrath,
Commander, 37th Training Group

ing through basic military training.

Hardrath then spent four years in the Utah Air National Guard while earning a bachelor's degree at the University of Utah, she joined the Reserve Officer Training Corps and was commissioned in 1991.

Her prior enlisted service has been beneficial in her career as a logistics readiness officer, she said.

"Long before I ever hit ROTC, I already had a massive amount of respect for the experience and skills of the senior NCOs," Hardrath said. "I'm a product of some very great mentoring at all levels. Our senior NCOs play a key role in helping commanders turn young officers into leaders."

One of the group's challenges, Hardrath said, is to work effectively within a constrained fiscal environment while continuing to produce quality Airmen.

She said streamlining processes and creating efficiencies produce cost savings, both effective tools to deal with budget cuts and manpower shortages.

Those savings come from "great ideas by smart folks," Hardrath said.

"Our instructors, military training leaders, officers and squadron commanders are listening to the troops under them. If they feel like their voice is being heard, it encourages more and better ideas. I've already seen how our strong squadron commanders working with their leadership teams are not only making great things happen on a daily basis, but they are implementing long-term positive changes to mitigate the resource constraints on our mission."

Hardrath said, up to now, being a squadron commander was the pinnacle of her career. However, she believes this assignment will easily become one of her best.

"The wing (37th Training Wing) has a phenomenal mission, and we have the right team in place to secure the future capabilities of our Air Force," she said.

"It's only been a short time, but even with the long hours and a couple of interesting challenges, I still can't wipe the smile off my face."

Army UH-1H finds new home at IAAFA's 318th TRS

By Mike Joseph
Senior Writer

The Inter-American Air Forces Academy at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland recently landed a new training tool that upgrades the helicopter maintenance courses it offers to students from Latin American partner nations.

The arrival of an Army UH-1H helicopter at IAAFA's 318th Training Squadron is expected to meet the growing needs of students who are here to learn how U.S. Airmen perform their mission.

"We have a culture of continuous improvement at the 318th TRS, and modernization is a big part of that culture," said Maj. Manuel Sotelo, the squadron's maintenance operations officer.

"We try to modernize to keep up with 21st century technologies, and the demand and requirements of our Latin American partners and students," he said. "This helicopter helps us do that."

As more Latin American countries integrate Huey II helicopters into their fleets, Sotelo said the acquisition of the 1983 UH-1H is just one half of an equation needed to meet new helicopter maintenance requirements.

The other half would involve adding a UH-1N helicopter to the IAAFA inventory. Integrating parts from both the H and N models would allow the academy to assemble a Huey II trainer.

"With the proper equipment, training and personnel, you can take parts from the H and N models to make a Huey II," he said. "We have identified an N model that may become available to us later.

"Then we've got the parts and pieces we need for conversion to what we're calling the 'Frankenstein' option of a Huey II. We can also use the Frankenstein as a training tool for students," he said.

Because expense was a key factor for IAAFA, instructors and senior leaders had to think outside the box to update helicopter maintenance courses.

Sotelo said a kit to modify one of the Vietnam era-helicopters in the IAAFA fleet to a Huey II trainer costs just under $2 million while a new Huey II carries a $9 million price tag.

"Neither of these options was economically feasible for us," he said, "but we weren't going to give up because we couldn't find the money."

Mutual cooperation between several Department of Defense agencies resulted in the transfer of the Army helicopter to the 37th Training Wing, IAAFA's parent organization, instead its original destination – a bone yard.

Flown by two Air Education and Training Command helicopter pilots assigned to Fort Rucker, Ala., the aircraft arrived at here July 24 after a two-day flight.

"Thankfully, Fort Rucker and the Air Force pilots were willing to help by flying it here at minimal cost," Sotelo said. "We're extremely grateful and fortunate. This UH-1H is not something picked up from the junk yard. It's fully functional."

AF training instructor responds to traffic accident

An Air Force Basic Military Training Instructor was late for his morning formation, but it was for the right kind of reason.

During his normal early morning commute Oct. 5, Staff Sgt. Stephen Dove was about to get on the 410 access ramp at Marbach Road in northwest San Antonio when he saw a truck speed away from a fast food restaurant. Spotting a motorcyclist on the ground nearby, he soon realized what he'd just witnessed was the aftermath of a traffic accident.

Dove parked his car and got someone to call 911 while he used his Air Force-taught Self Aid and Buddy Care Skills to render aid to the 28-year-old victim.

Determining the victim may have sustained a spinal injury, Dove stayed to keep the victim still until help arrived, and provide information to emergency medical responders and police. The victim was transported to a local hospital.

Electrical Safety

Flipping a light switch. Plugging in a coffeemaker. Charging a laptop computer. These are second nature for most of us. Electricity makes our lives easier. However, we need to be cautious and keep safety in mind.

SAFETY TIPS

- » Have all electrical work done by a qualified electrician.
- » When you are buying or remodeling a home, have it inspected by a qualified electrician.
- » Only plug one heat-producing appliance (such as a coffee maker, toaster, space heater, etc.) into a receptacle outlet at a time.
- » Major appliances (refrigerators, dryers, washers, stoves, air conditioners, etc.) should be plugged directly into a wall receptacle outlet. Extension cords and plug strips should not be used.
- » Arc fault circuit interrupters (AFCIs) are a kind of circuit breaker that shuts off electricity when a dangerous condition occurs. Consider having them installed in your home. Use a qualified electrician.
- » Use ground fault circuit interrupters (GFCIs) to reduce the risk of shock. GFCIs shut off an electrical circuit when it becomes a shock hazard. They should be installed inside the home in bathrooms, kitchens, garages and basements. All outdoor receptacles should be GFCI protected.
- » Test AFCIs and GFCIs once a month to make sure they are working properly.
- » Check electrical cords to make sure they are not running across doorways or under carpets. Extension cords are intended for temporary use. Have a qualified electrician add more receptacle outlets so you don't have to use extension cords.
- » Use light bulbs that match the recommended wattage on the lamp or fixture. There should be a sticker that indicates the maximum wattage light bulb to use.

IMPORTANT REMINDER
Call a qualified electrician or your landlord if you have:

- Frequent problems with blowing fuses or tripping circuit breakers
- A tingling feeling when you touch an electrical appliance
- Discolored or warm wall outlets
- A burning or rubbery smell coming from an appliance
- Flickering or dimming lights
- Sparks from an outlet

 Christmas at the Base Exchange*

AAFES contest highlights holiday season

DALLAS – Exchange shoppers won't have to wait for December to start the holiday season as the Army and Air Force Exchange Service's Facebook page is hosting the "Twelve Weeks of Gifting" contest. From now through Dec. 20, customers can enter to win prizes each week.

As Christmas Day gets closer, prizes get bigger and better; each week's giveaway is a secret. Shoppers can visit the Exchange Facebook each week to enter.

Much like the "Twelve Days of Christmas", each week will have a corresponding number of prizes. For example, week 12 will have 12 winners, week 11 will award 11 gifts, while week one has one, a grand prize winner.

"Twelve Weeks of Gifting" is a great opportunity to give back to our loyal Exchange shoppers," said the Exchange's Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief Master Sgt. Tony Pearson. "This contest is guaranteed to get you into the holiday spirit."

Complete rules for the Exchange's "Twelve Weeks of Gifting" contest are available on the Exchange Facebook page at www.facebook.com/AAFES.BX.PX.

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO-FORT SAM HOUSTON, Texas – Post leaders cut the ribbon for the newly remodeled Survivor Outreach Services Sept. 29 to officially open the facility and to honor Gold Star Mothers and families.

More than 100 survivors, family, friends and community members attended the ceremony at the Joint Base San Antonio-Fort Sam Houston Theater, which hosted the event for the outreach facility dedicated to those who have lost service members.

"To our Gold Star Mothers and family members here today, thank you for making the trip," said Army Maj. Gen. Adolph McQueen Sr., deputy commanding general for support, U.S. Army North. "Whether it was a few blocks or many hours of travel, we are glad you could be here."

McQueen followed on the heels of Debbie Agnew, a Gold Star Mother and keynote speaker for the event. Agnew's son, Army Staff Sgt. Clint Newman, was killed by terrorists during an improvised-explosive device attack while serving in Afghanistan Feb. 13, 2006. He was assigned to the 321st Civil Affairs Brigade at JBSA-Fort Sam Houston.

Agnew said of all the things she learned from her experiences and ordeals, the one thing that made the biggest impact in her life was the help she received from the SOS.

"No matter how horrible the situation we may find ourselves in is, there is always something to be positive about," Agnew said.

"It's not about the storms we must weather but about learning to dance in the rain.' I would love to say I learned all this on my own, but I had many people who were there for me along the way."

And while it was a lesson she learned over time, she knew that she was not alone following the death of her son Clint.

"I began to understand what the term 'Army Family' truly meant," she said. "The help we receive is not just to honor the lives of our fallen loved ones, but to help us accept the situation and the reality of what has happened, and to be able to move on from that. I thought that was harsh at first, but I see now how important it was."

Agnew said she was very glad to have what SOS offered and that she felt the new facility would expand on the support for the families.

It will be a place to be proud of – as well as appreciated, she added, and having a facility such as this is important.

"We share the same loss; we understand each other, and we know there is no need for excuses," Agnew said, in talking about the bond Gold Star Mothers and families share with one another.

It is important, McQueen added, that the military community maintains its close ties and strong support for its military family members.

"SOS was born out of the recognizable need to never stop supporting our Gold Star families in our community," he said. "Our families are something to be cherished eternally."

"You will never be left out in the cold – you will always be a part of our family."

Base readies for Cyber Readiness Inspection

DISA team to evaluate base network, physical security

Inspectors from the Defense Information Systems Agency will visit Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland Jan. 7, 2013 to conduct a Command Cyber Readiness Inspection, which evaluates the base community's cyber security posture.

This inspection is mandated by Department of Defense security standards to ensure Air Force networks are effectively secured.

As part of the five-day inspection, the DISA team will evaluate network and physical security, validating network infrastructure perimeter defense, wireless technologies, and the client systems vulnerability status. Inspectors will also validate compliance with information assurance policies, as well as the base community's ability to provide security for its unclassified and classified computer systems.

Deficiencies highlighted during previous inspections have resulted in the Chief of Staff of the Air Force directing the restriction or disconnection of base networks from the Global Information Grid, or GIG.

"The GIG is a set of information capabilities for collecting, processing, storing, disseminating, and managing information on-demand to warfighters, policy makers, and support personnel," said Lt. Col. Glenn Garay, commander of the 802nd Communications Squadron. "Due to the potential outcome of this assessment, we need all commanders and their units to take a personal interest in the CCRI."

"This is a major inspection performed biennially and its success depends on the level of attention base personnel pay to cyber security," said Maj. Kelly Roxburgh Martinez, commander of the 690th Intelligence Support Squadron.

"Taking steps such as removing our common access cards from computers when we leave our desks, not downloading email attachments from unknown senders, protecting passwords and personal identification numbers, not using unauthorized Universal Serial Bus (USB) devices, challenging unfamiliar people in the work area and making sure visitors are provided escorts when necessary are all actions we should be performing daily," said Ramiro Tey, chief of the 802nd CS Operations Flight. "We must also ensure laptops are on the network in order to be scanned and patched for vulnerabilities on a regular basis."

"The CCRI is a significant inspection and failure is not an option. An unsatisfactory rating would result in our networks being disconnected from the GIG. This inspection impacts us all, and this means we need a total-force effort to succeed," said Garay.

The DISA inspection team will visit locations throughout the base, and may employ social engineering and phishing techniques such as attempting to get access to secure areas, pursuing users to provide information such as passwords or logons, and sending emails with links and attachments that are not digitally signed to test the cyber awareness of JBASA-Lackland personnel.

"Personnel must know their unit information assurance officer, not just for the inspection but at all times," said Garay. "The unit information assurance officer is our first contact in regards to security issues. Personnel should work through them because they know base security policies and can answer their questions."

Officials with the 802nd CS said that in accordance with Air Force Instructions, protecting against threats and vulnerabilities on information systems is a user's responsibility.

"We must be vigilant, pay attention to details and be aware of the potential consequences associated with carelessness," said Tey.

Preparations for the CCRI are well underway at the 802nd CS. The unit, in conjunction with the 690th ISS, conducted two informational meetings with base client support technicians and functional system administrators in August 2012 to ensure personnel have the tools necessary to protect systems against any known vulnerabilities within their organizations.

Airmen from the 802nd CS and 690th ISS also are constantly scanning unclassified and classified networks, respectively, to ensure system vulnerabilities are identified and corrected, and systems are running authorized configurations and applications.

People with questions or concerns about the CCRI, can call Terence Frankland at 210-925-CCRI (2274) for assistance.

CCRI TIMELINE

- June 15: 802nd CS stands up second shift to tackle known Category 1 vulnerabilities.
- Aug. 16: 802nd CS and 690th ISS hold CST/FSA meeting to address CCRI Inspection and known vulnerabilities.
- Aug. 29: 802nd CS and 690th ISS hold a second CST/FSA meetings to address CCRI inspection and known vulnerabilities.
- Sept. 24: 802nd CS and 690th ISS send out NIPRNet/SIPRNet Disconnect Policy to organizations.
- Oct. 7: 802nd CS and 690th ISS provide DISA Inspection team with JBASA-Lackland Proof Book Continuity Binder and other deliverables.
- Oct. 9: 802nd CS and 690th ISS disconnect personal computers that have not been patched or remediated, or that do not have proper certification and accreditation.
- Dec. 7: No computer will be added or changes authorized to the unclassified and classified network 30 days prior to the CCRI Inspection.
- Jan. 7, 2013: DISA CCRI team at Lackland to perform inspection.

JBSA-Fort Sam Houston dumps Warhawks

Rangers drop varsity team 92-80 in preseason basketball

By Jose T. Garza III
Sports Editor

The Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland Warhawks men's varsity basketball team fell to the JBSA-Fort Sam Houston Rangers, 92-80, in a preseason game Oct. 3 at the base Chaparral Fitness Center.

JBSA-Fort Sam Houston forward Leslie Autrey scored a game-high 35 points and Rangers guards Audrey Lamb and Curtis Dilworth each added 19 points in the win.

Despite the loss, five Warhawks players scored in double digits.

Guard Deandre Snow and forward/guard Maurice Jenkins-Day each scored 15 points, guard Steve Constantin racked up 11 points, and forwards Ty Moore and Darrell Davis each had 10 for the Warhawks.

Behind 38-37 at the half, the JBSA-Lackland offense shifted momentum its way early in the second half, opening up a nine-point lead six minutes into the period.

But then the wheels started to come off the Warhawks' offensive machine. The Rangers chipped away at the lead, narrowing the deficit to two with just under 10 minutes to play in the game.

A layup from Dilworth gave JBSA-Fort Sam its first lead of the second half at 67-66. The Warhawks stayed within striking distance, but ultimately, the Rangers' fast breaks and rapid drives through the paint made the difference.

With the game tied at 73, JBSA-Lackland turned the ball over and the Rangers went on a decisive 16-5 run with five minutes to play.

The last of Dilworth's 19 points came on a game-ending layup that produced the final score and Fort Sam's largest lead in the game.

The two teams had been on an even keel before JBSA-Fort Sam's decisive double-digit run in the last five minutes.

Rangers coach Delvin Maston, who was issued a technical foul for arguing with an official and tossing his clipboard to the floor in the first half, liked the way his team bounced back from a subpar performance on both ends of the floor.

"We played great defense in the last part of the second half, but the opposite was true early on. We didn't play much defense in the first half."

"We finally settled down and started knocking down a few shots," Maston said. "We stopped settling for long shots and started pushing the ball into the paint. That's what turned the game around."

"Once we started driving more into the paint, our outside shots started flowing, too," he added.

Maston said his players may have faced a deficit in the middle of the second half but they were never down on themselves.

"We might be behind but we are never down," he said. "We, as a team, just stick together."

"We practice everyday for these types of situations where we are down by 10 or 15 points with two minutes left so we can be prepared to handle them," he added.

Warhawks coach Laurus Martin said giving up second-chance shots and turning the ball over, along with the Rangers' three-point play opportunities, led to his team's downfall.

"Second shots and three-point plays kept us from winning this game," Martin said. "We didn't execute well down the stretch, had crucial turnovers at the wrong time, and gave up too many easy baskets."

Martin said the team needs to improve its defense and rebounding, and cut down on turnovers.

"We need to help each other on defense and take care of the ball down the stretch," he said.

The loss drops the Warhawks to 1-2 in preseason play.

The Warhawks open the regular season Nov. 3 against teams from McConnell Air Force Base, Kan. at 2 p.m. and Holloman AFB, N.M. at 6 p.m. at the Warhawk Fitness Center.

Base to host its 5th sports camp this year

JBSA-Lackland readies for its first All-Air Force basketball camp

By Jose T. Garza III
Sports Editor

Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland sports and fitness assistant director Dwayne Reed is ready for his sports and fitness program to continue to build on its Armed Forces and Air Force-wide success this year.

After hosting four different All-Air Force camps in boxing, bowling, softball, and soccer this year, and the Armed Forces bowling championships, JBSA-Lackland now gets to host the All-Air Force basketball camp Wednesday through Nov. 3 at the Chaparral Fitness Center.

JBSA-Lackland then hosts the annual Armed Forces Basketball Tournament Nov. 4-12 at the same venue. The Air Force has won the Armed Forces basketball tourney for six years in a row.

Seventeen players from several Air Force bases will participate in the two-week camp. Fifteen players will be selected to represent the Air Force in its pursuit of a seventh straight Armed Forces gold medal.

Joseph Easley, a senior airman with the 737th Training Support Squadron, is the sole player from JBSA-Lackland vying for a roster spot.

Last year, Lackland hosted the U.S. Armed Forces Basketball Camp at the Medina Fitness Center.

The team, comprised of the best players from all the services, prepared for the Conseil International du Sport Militaire World Military Basketball Championships in Brazil where the team tied for the best record in the tournament.

Reed said its been a very good year for Lackland when it comes to its sports program, and he's excited about the base's first All-Air Force basketball camp after putting in a bid through Air Force Sports to host the camp last year.

"We are ready to host any sport every year. I feel confident in my staff's ability to support the All-Air Force sports teams, so I know we are ready to host these camps," said Reed.

"We will assist the team players with whatever they need. To us, it will just be business as usual," he added.

"I'll have two members from my staff who will work closely with the team to provide the players with everything from Gatorade and towels to computer and internet access."

Reed doesn't see any major challenges in hosting another sports camp this year except for perhaps having adequate air conditioning in the Chaparral Fitness Center.

A new air conditioning unit is expected to be installed after the camp and tourney conclude.

"But it's usually cool this time of year, so it shouldn't be a huge deal for the All-Air Force basketball players," Reed said.

"Jerry Jones is a genius; the plan is working. The other teams are letting their guard down and now it's time for the Cowboys to clean up and make a run toward the playoffs."
